I beg to submit, it is a Utopian thing. If the demand is fixed at a particular level, I can give the period by which we will be self-sufficient. But demand is increasing and as I have already submitted, oil cannot be manufactured in a factory. It has to be explored, it has to be exploited. Infrastructure has to be laid. I want to assure the hon. Member that we are taking all steps in this direction. We were advised that we should slow down our exploratory efforts because oil prices have fallen down, but we did not take to that line. We continued our own efforts with other international companies which I have already submitted by increasing the refining capacity and we have been lucky to strike oil and gas in various parts of the country—east, west, north and south— and we are making efforts. But we will have to lay very huge infrastructure to utilise that. The time will come and we will do that.
